BLAST LiVEJOURNAL™

April 28, 2007 Circulation: n/a

DreamAuthentics Katana

DreamAuthentics' Katana machine is made for folks who want a taste of old-school arcade fun without the bulk. Fitting reasonably well on a desktop, the Katana looks like a junior version of an arcade console, sporting a 17-inch flat display and classic joystick/button controls. The cabinet is built around a Windows PC with DA's proprietary software package that includes over 200 arcade classics like Dig Dug and 1942 as well as titles from the Atari 2600. There's also a jukebox application that mimics the look and flavor of the type you'd find in your neighborhood pub, controlled by authentic buttons on the front.

Katanas will be available for all starting in May for $2,495 each. A little bit extra and they'll customize the cabinet for you.