BLAST

SLASHGEAR

June 19, 2007 Circulation: 49,140

The Katana from DreamAuthentics - An arcade cabinet for small spaces

Tuesday, Jun 19th 2007 by Chris Scott Barr

If you're looking for an arcade cabinet but don't have room for the full stand-up unit, you might want to check out is table top unit from DreamAuthentics.

The Katana is is designed to sit on top of a table or bar and is fully customizable from the inside out. Each unit is built to the customer's specifications with options ranging from art graphics on the outside, marquees, joy-sticks and even a racing wheel.

Each Katana is built around a 17-inch flat screen display that is powered by a custom PC-based game engine with over 200 licensed arcade games and a 2 speaker audio system with subwoofer. In addition to the games

Since you won't be playing games on it 24×7, DreamAuthentics has put in their exclusive jukebox feature. It has the look and feel of an authentic jukebox that will play your collection of MP3s.

Although the Katana is built with a budget in mind, it will still cost you a pretty penny. But the $2,495 is far less than you might pay for one of their full-size units.